CHARACTER CREATION

If you're planning to go on Oblivion's main quest, you'll need a character that can handle it. Several battles will involve pitched infantry combat, which certain builds simply aren't very good at; while there are ways to compensate, it's easy to get in over your head. For example, if you're planning to play a stealth-based character or a bow specialist, consider picking up Conjunction, so you can whistle up a few zombies or monsters as backup, or Blade, so you can defend yourself adequately once somebody closes to melee.

It's also worthy to note that Oblivion's main quest seems to be designed with the assumption that you will take it seriously and accomplish it as soon as you can. It's simply challenging if you undertake it as a first-level character, but if you put it off until later, you'll quickly regret it. With Oblivion's approach to level-scaling, some of the later battles become utterly lethal for a high-level character, as they involve hordes and hordes of monsters. If it's a bunch of Scamps or Dremora peons, it's no big deal whatever level you're at, but a bunch of conjurers and magic-wielding warriors will tear through you in no time flat. Thus, if you intend to do the main quest at all, do it ASAP; this'll also have the happy side effect of giving you the high Fame rating you need to take on some of the other quests.

For a newcomer to the game, we recommend playing a Redguard; Adrenaline Rush is arguably the best combat buff in the game, and their Resist Disease/Poison abilities come in handy. A strong melee class with stealth or magic as a fallback seems to be the most balanced, best way to make it through the game; if you don't have Security, get Alteration, and if you don't have Sneak, get Illusion.

Our character for this walkthrough was a Redguard Adventurer, born under the sign of the Warrior, with specializations in Blade, Marksman, Sneak, Alteration, Restoration, Heavy Armor and Block; we spent most of the game dispatching enemies with stealthy violence, and the Blade proficiency let us hold our own once melee broke out. Alteration spells can be used to open locked doors and chests. (Tip: Don't fear the slider. Don't be afraid to turn down the difficulty if you start running into problems. Oblivion's default difficulty seems to assume you're playing a high-strength melee tank, so if you aren't, you can get in over your head very quickly.)

PRISON BREAK

You'll begin the game inside a cell in the Imperial Prison. Ignore the mouthy elf across the hall, and wait for a little while. You'll receive deliverance shortly, in the form of one Emperor Uriel Septim.

In the meantime, avoid picking anything up. Note that items that aren't worth any gold, such as pewter cups, bones, skulls, useless tools or other random bits of debris, have no greater use to speak of. You don't have to be a packrat in Oblivion, and as a matter of fact, it's a pretty bad idea.

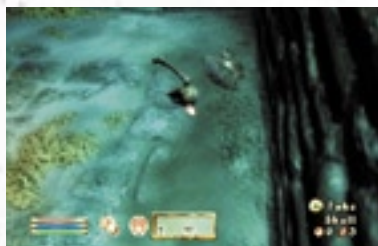

Follow the Emperor and his retinue down the secret passage, and stay clear of the bands of assassins that'll come after you. While members of the Mythic Dawn aren't as tough as they look - they are almost all conjurers who whistle up Bound Armor and Bound Swords to attack - they're tougher than you can realistically handle at this point in the game.

When the Blades' captain falls, search her body for a steel shortsword. You can also grab her powerful katana off the ground nearby, which'll serve you well in the fights to come.

Shortly afterward, you'll be left to your own devices, but watch the nearby wall; there are incoming rats. They'll helpfully open the way to a set of caverns, which'll provide you with your way out, but they aren't without their own dangers.

Dispatch the rats within this area and search the skeleton of the dead thief; he'll have armor, weapons, lockpicks and a shield for you. Open the nearby chest with the lockpicks for loot, then grab the Iron Key off the dead goblin shaman. This'll open the nearby door.

Inside, practice a bit of spellcasting to dispatch the sentry rat, then open the chest to find some armor; often, you'll find some heavy armor here, such as a Rusty Iron Cuirass.

Continuing to follow this path will take you through a roomful of wreckage, where you'll find some food, another shield and an Iron Warhammer in the middle of the room. Continue to open every chest you find, kill every rat you see and take everything that isn't nailed down until you get to the other end of the cavern... which, unfortunately, is goblin country.

Sneak up on the first goblin, then grab the potion ingredients, poison, mortar and pestle he was guarding. The next goblin in line has set up a tripwire, which will drop a few large maces on your head if you set it off. Sneak up on him or get him to set off his own trap, then slip by his ambush and use the logs in the next area to kill the next two goblins.

They're the last guards you'll find before you reach the largest cavern in this area, where a Goblin Shaman is waiting at the other end. He knows a couple of attack spells, so your best bet is to take him out before he knows you're there. Drop whatever combat buffs you know, sneak up behind him, and waste him with a melee attack. The Iron Warhammer or Katana will work well here.

Once you've defeated the Shaman, you've just about caught up to the Blades and the Emperor. Drop down into the room with them, then let the Blades do the grunt work as you follow them through the facility. You'll eventually witness the Emperor's unfortunate fate, and be given your first mission: bring the Amulet of Kings to Weynon Priory. Baurus will give you the key you need to leave via the sewers, and confiscate Renault's katana if you took it.

Defeat a few more rats and goblins, and you'll be home free, at a sewer exit just north of the Imperial City. It's not a bad idea to stop by the City for a bit, to sell off any valuables you gathered, repair and upgrade your equipment and join the Thieves' Guild if you intend to make a career out of larceny. (They'll approach you if you do any prison time.) Once you've done all that, it's time to head west.

DELIVER THE AMULET

Weynon Priory isn't hard to find; it's right outside Chorrol. Jauffre, the man you're here to see, is usually inside the Weynon House. Give him the Amulet, and he'll tell you to go talk to Martin, the priest of Akatosh in Kvatch, a good ways south of here. If you ask Jauffre for Assistance, he'll allow you to take the weapons and armor out of the treasure chest in his study. His fellow monks will give you a horse and a book that'll raise your Block skill when you read it.

FIND THE HEIR

Whether you head overland or take the road to Kvatch, you'll run into quite a few bandit camps along the way. Be on your guard.

Unfortunately, as is the way of such things, you'll arrive just in time to watch Kvatch burn. Two of the women in the refugee encampment can sell you potions or repair your equipment, but once you're set, go up to just outside the city and talk to Savlian Matius. It looks like Oblivion's managed to destroy Kvatch.

You can get into the city and see Martin without shutting the Oblivion Gate, but he'll refuse to leave until the gate's shut and the city's no longer in danger. It looks like you'll have to play hero.

Monsters and You

At low levels, you'll fight expendable daedra like Clanfear Runts, Stunted Scamps, and wussy Dremora fighters. As you level up, they will too; you'll start running into full-grown Clanfear, Scamps, annoying Flame Atronach, and increasingly potent Dremora conjurers. Sadly, NPC backup such as the Kvatch town guard do not level up, and as such, will drop like flies against high-level daedra. This is yet another reason to get the main quest over with early.

Enter the Oblivion Gate, and you'll wind up in a land of lava and blasted black plains. As you might expect, anything that goes into the lava is as good as dead, so avoid this. You'll also need to avoid the Harrada roots, which lash out at anything that gets close; Spiddal plants, which erupt in clouds of poison gas; and the small spiny growths on the ground, which are pretty much land mines. You can detonate the latter early by shooting them with a bow, but you'll simply have to avoid the fauna.

Save the surviving guard near the entrance, then bring him with you or dispatch him back to Kvatch as you see fit. You've got bigger problems. Tip for level-scaling: at low levels, Oblivion is full of stuff like Stunted Scampis and low-level Dremora fighters. If you reach this area as a higher-level character, you'll wind up fighting a lot of fire andronach, full-blown Scamps, Dremora conjurers and powerful Dremora warriors. The overwhelming theme, whatever level you are, is lots of fire flying directly at your face. Pack accordingly. You'll also want to bring plenty of Repair Hammers, naturally.

Cross the bridge to the War Gate. You can't open it at the moment; instead, climb the hill nearby and enter the base of the tower: the Blood Well. The ominously-named Corpse Masher is an elevator that'll take you up to the bottom of the ramp; climb it to the top of the tower. The Blood Fountain will heal your wounds, and you can use a lever nearby to open a gate. Go back down to the back of the tower, careful to leap off the Corpse Masher before it hits the spikes on the floor, and work your way northeast to find the door to the Blood Feast.

Take out the high population of enemies on the ground floor, then head through the Rending Halls. Work your way up through the Corridors of Dark Salvation, and when you find a door that cannot be opened, head outside and across the bridge. Dispatch the Dremora Sigil Keeper at the top of the next tower to get a special key, then talk to his captive for a clue as to what to do next.

Using his key, fight your way to the top of the Blood Feast tower and take the Sigil Stone out of the pillar of light on the topmost level. This will automatically trigger the appearance of more enemies, but will eventually transport you back to Kvatch and close the Oblivion gate. (Note: Whenever you close an Oblivion Gate, you'll do it the same way: by fighting to the top of the central tower and swiping its Sigil Stone. Any character can use these Stones to enchant an item of armor or apparel, usually with a stat-boosting effect. Thus, it's worth your while to close any Oblivion Gate you happen across.)

BREAKING THE SIEGE AT KVATCH

You don't have to do this right now. Once the Oblivion Gate closes, Martin will leave the temple and go to the refugee camp, where you can talk to him to continue the story.

Talk to Matius, and he'll ask your help clearing out the southern plaza. Go in there and kill everything you see, then talk to him again and go into the chapel. Now's a good time to fast-travel back to the Imperial City or some other location and repair your equipment.

When you're done, return to Matius and tell him you're ready. After dispatching a couple of goons in the northern plaza, he'll ask you to get into the castle via the North Guard House. Go back into the chapel of Akatosh, and you'll receive some backup from a couple of Imperial Legion Soldiers. Talk to the guardsman and he'll show you into the chapel's undercroft.

Fight your way through a few more enemies there, and then into the guardhouse. After the guard opens the underground passage for you - or after you take the key from his dead body and use it to open that passage - you'll be able to open the castle gates. Just try to stay alive after the ensuing melee, and save your strength for the battles in the castle proper. This place is full of loot, like silver dishware, but it's also got stronger enemies; our Adventurer was level 4 and wound up facing off against quite a few Scamps, while our luckless level-17 Thief wound up dealing with a bunch of huge, high-level Clanfear. (Think Jurassic Park.)

Fight your way into the count's quarters, where you'll find the poor guy face-down. Search him and grab his signet ring, then give it to Matius in the courtyard. He'll give you the Kvatch Cuirass, which isn't a bad piece of Light Armor if you're into that sort of thing.

WEYNON PRIORY

Go back to the refugee camp and head to Weynon Priory with Martin in tow. When you get there, you'll find that our old friends in the Mythic Dawn beat you there, and they're throwing a massacre.

Talk to Jauffre inside the chapel, then follow him to the secret room in the Weynon House. You'll find out your next quest goal: go to Cloud Ruler Temple near Bruma.

Since both Jauffre and Martin can take care of themselves quite well, now isn't a bad time to go sidequesting. The three of you together can clear out dungeons with surprising ease.

Once you're done with that, take Martin to the Cloud Ruler Temple. You can opt to join the Blades at this point, thus earning your very own Akaviri Katana if you want one;

since it happens to be one of the best nonmagical weapons in the game, you definitely want one. You can also grab the Blades' armor from the west wing armory. The Blades Shield and Blades Greaves are particularly nice.

THE PATH OF DAWN

Now it's time to head back to the Imperial City. Head to Luther Broad's Boarding House in the Elven Gardens district, have a seat at the bar, and have a remarkably civil conversation with Baurus. He'll ask you to tail his tail, so to speak; when he gets up, he'll lead the guy following him into the boarding house's basement. Help Baurus whack the guy, and take the book he was so intent upon.

Take that book to Tar-Meena at the Arcane University. She'll give you the second volume of the set, and encourage you to go to First Edition in the Market District. The proprietor's already sold volume three to another customer, Gwinas; you can use high Speechcraft to fasttalk him into selling it to you anyway, or mug Gwinas for it once he's paid. The nonviolent, non-criminal way to do this is to tail Gwinas back to the Tiber Septim Inn in Talos Plaza, and talk him out of the book. Just lean on him a little and he'll give it and a note over of his own free will.

Go back to Baurus with the book and the note and talk to him. He'll lead you into the sewers below the Elven Gardens, so he can meet with the goons. The first guy's name is Raven Corcoran, and he's something of a beast; if you let Baurus handle him alone, he'll tear through Baurus in nothing flat. Drop down the moment the fight starts and try to get his attention; when you drop him, you'll find the fourth volume, among other goodies, on his corpse. Don't let your guard down, though; he didn't exactly come alone. It'll be easier to keep Baurus alive if you go to meet Raven.

Now, let's sit down and spend some quality time with a lunatic's mad rantings, shall we? Tar-Meena will tell you the answer to this puzzle if you keep talking to her on subsequent days, but let's spoil it: the first letter of each paragraph will spell out "green emperor way where tower touches midday sun."

Go to Green Emperor Way, the street that surrounds the palace, and look for the tomb of Prince Camarril. At noon, a map will light up on its side, showing you where to look: Lake Arrius Caverns, north of Cheydinhal.

DAGON SHRINE

Once inside, you could go all Rambo in there and kill everyone you see, or use Mythic Dawn robes to try to pose as one of the cultists. We'll be adopting the former approach, because, well, why not; if you try to bluff your way in with a disguise, you'll wind up having to run for your life from a bunch of angry cultists. Personally, we'd rather just kill everyone, but then, we're like that.

Most of the people in the Caverns are going to be low-level conjurers in the typical Mythic Dawn style. They may use Spark or a similar spell as an opening move, but will almost always use Bound Armor/Weapon spells to press their attack. The best way to deal with them is to launch an arrow at them from concealment, which will often drop them in one hit. This is why coming in here like an invading army isn't such a big deal for a stealthy fighter-type, as with enough arrows, you can skulk through here and kill everyone without a problem.

Drop the doorkeeper and take the Shrine of Dagon Key off of his corpse. Enter, and it's just a short jaunt south to find the door to the shrine itself. Get close and listen in on the sermon in progress, and you'll find out the Amulet's already gone. That leads quite naturally to your next move: abscond with the Mysterium Xerxes, the book on Ruma Corcoran's podium.

Perform a few judicious assassinations from the shadows above the shrine; Ruma's packing a mystical staff that could put a hurting on you if she's allowed to bring it into play. Grab the book, watch out for the subsequently collapsing statue, and get the hell out of here. You'll have to go the long way around, through the Dawn's living quarters and mess hall, but carving up another dozen acolytes shouldn't be a problem.

Return to Cloud Ruler Temple. If Baurus survived the fight in the Imperial City, he'll show you a few tricks, raising your Blade, Block and Heavy Armor skills. Now, talk to Martin, then go outside and ask Jauffre about spies.

SPIES

Jauffre will send you to Bruma to talk to the guard captain, Burd. He's usually in the castle's barracks, and he's not much help. He'll tell you to talk to Jearl, who has a house in town; problematically, Jearl and her buddy Saveri are the spies. If you break into Jearl's house, they'll instantly attack you; alternatively, you can lurk in ambush for them at the runestone Jauffre mentioned, which is at the base of the path leading up to Cloud Ruler Temple. Either way, search Jearl's body for the Basement Key. That key opens the trapdoor in the floor.

Go downstairs and read Jearl's Orders, which are lying on the desk. Take them and go see Jauffre again.

BLOOD OF THE DAEDRA

He'll direct you to Martin, who needs a daedric artifact to proceed with the ritual. Go find the book Modern Heretics in the temple library. Reading it will direct you to Azura's Shrine, north of Lake Arrius.

Go there and persuade Mels Maryon to tell you what must be done to summon Azura. You'll need to leave her an offering of glow dust, which can be obtained by killing will o' the wisps, or by buying it at the Main Ingredient in the Imperial City Market District. Offer Azura the dust around 5:30 PM, and she'll send you on a quest to kill the five vampiric inhabitants of the Gutted Mine, a short distance to the southwest. Take them out, and grab the Worn, Faded Note off the ringleader's body, then return to Azura's shrine. Activate it, and she'll give you Azura's Star. (Note: Martin just needs a daedric artifact, and not necessarily Azura's Star. Any shrine you find will have a similar quest for you, with a similar reward, and any one of the items you get will serve Martin's purposes. Azura's Star is simply the most convenient of your available options; however, as it's a reusable soul gem, it's also very useful for a character who's reliant on magical items or skilled in Mysticism.)

Return to Cloud Ruler Temple and give Azura's Star to Martin. He'll tell you to talk to Jauffre, who in turn will inform you of the hilarity ensuing outside Bruma. You've got another Oblivion gate to close.

BRUMA GATE

Go to Bruma and talk to Burd, who's waiting outside Bruma's east entrance. At least this time, you'll have some backup. Fight your way to the center of this plane of Oblivion and climb the tower, just as you did before; the key to the sigil room is being carried by the Sigil Keeper, a sword-waving Dremora who's standing right in front of the door. To accomplish this mission, Burd must be next to you as you grab the sigil stone.

Report back to Martin and Jauffre. Jauffre wants you to search out the rulers of the other cities of Cyrodiil and enlist their aid; Martin needs the Armor of Tiber Septim. Let's handle the latter first.

BLOOD OF THE DIVINES

The Armor is in Sance Tor, a ruined fort a long hike north of Chorrol. It's inhabited by a lot of ghosts, so stock up on silver or magical equipment before you go. The first skeleton you run into inside the fort itself is a tougher-than-usual Undead Blade, who'll appear as a spectre upon the skeleton's destruction. It'll inform you of one of your goals while you're in here: destroy all four Undead Blades so that they may help you out.

Going in a semblance of order: sneak into the Prison and destroy the skeleton of the Warden so you can take his key. One of the Undead Blades is prowling at the back of the prison; destroy him and backtrack.

Casnar's ghost is in the Hall of Judgment, near the back. Pass back through the Hall to reach the Catacombs, where you'll run into the final ghost almost immediately, and then go to the sealed sanctum. The four ghostly Blades will break the seal on the shrine, allowing you to claim the Armor of Tiber Septim. Give that to Martin for yet another fetch quest.

MISCARCAND

This time, you're headed to Miscarcand, an ancient Ayleid city that's just north of Ra'sava Camp, along the road to Kvatch. The fun part of this dungeon's that it's infested with goblins and undead, neither of which particularly enjoy the other's company. You can often just let them fight it out, then mop up the survivors.

Aside from that, this dungeon's initially straightforward. There's really only one way you can go; when you reach the bridge overlooking the "throne room," fire a couple of arrows to turn the locals against each other, then drop down into a quiet corner and invade goblin territory. Hit the push block in their lair, then go upstairs via the gate you passed earlier and return to the bridge.

Once inside Sel Vanua, play it sneaky; the goblins and undead are having a nice little war of their own, and you don't really need to get involved. Once most or all of them are dead, clean up the remainder, hit the push block on the wall and grab the valuable Varla Stone out of the cage in the center of the room.

Leave via the only other available doorway, and you can follow this hallway straight, down another bridge overlooking a roomful of feuding goblins and skeletons and to another pushblock. Follow it around, and you'll be underneath the bridge you crossed earlier. Take out the trash and go north to find Morimath.

This is nicely straightforward, but make sure you're healed and wielding something that'll put a dent in undead. The moment you take the Great Stone from its resting place, the King of Miscarcand - a spellcasting skeleton - will pop up behind you and attack. It folds fairly easily in melee, but the combination of its Spark spells and its two Guardian Zombie sidekicks can add up to serious pain in a hurry.

Bringing this final bit back to Martin means that all you can do now is wait until the Mythic Dawn springs their attack. You can go recruit more backup from other cities around Cyrodiil now, or let Bruma stand on its own; the more backup you recruit, the better off you'll be.

ALLIES FOR BRUMA

You can go to the rulers of every city in the region, except the Imperial City, and try to get them to commit troops to Bruma's defense. With two exceptions, they'll all sing you the same old song: they aren't doing anything for Bruma while there's still an open Oblivion Gate close to their borders. Coincidentally, new Oblivion Gates have just opened right next to every city in the region. Funny how that works.

Once you close each city's Oblivion Gate, their overjoyed rulers will dispatch a few warriors or archers to see to Bruma's defense. For the most part, this is easy work; once you've closed one Oblivion Gate, you've closed them all. There are two exceptions, however.

Cheydinhal Gate

The count's too worried about his son to commit to anything. Go see Amminus in or around the Knights of the Thorn's lodge, and he'll tell you about the Knights of the Thorn, who went missing inside the Oblivion Gate. You'll have to either rescue the count's son or confirm that he's dead.

Head into the Oblivion Gate and follow the path around; don't drop down. You'll find a gate to the Bowels; drop through the holes in the floor. You'll emerge onto another Oblivion Realm path, which leads to another run through the Bowels. Farwil's waiting on the other side. Your job is now to try to somehow keep him alive - and his body somewhere where you can search it; Farwil has a habit of falling into lava - while you go to claim the sigil stone. The problem with this is that both Farwil and his friend are very aggro and have a habit of running directly into you while you're fighting. Activate the sigil stone, and take either Farwil's signet ring or Farwil himself back to his father. If Farwil dies, you'll get 150 gold and the signet ring; if Farwil survives, you'll be made an honorary Knight of the Thorn.

Kvatch

Assuming you've retaken the castle, all you have to do is go into the castle proper and talk to the guard captain.

Once you've assembled all the forces you can, or all the forces you care to, go speak to the countess of Bruma and meet her and Martin in the Chapel of Talos in Bruma. Tell the countess to let the battle begin whenever you're ready.

DEFENSE OF BRUMA

The more soldiers you have, the better off you'll be, because they can mob-rush the monsters that'll pop out of the Oblivion Gates. Your only concern is that Martin Septim survives until the Great Oblivion Gate opens, and the more soldiers that're on the field, the better.

THE GREAT GATE

Once the gate opens, jump in. Now, this is a chase scene. You have 15 minutes to grab the Great Sigil Stone and save the world. Start your run by heading inside the left-hand tower near your entry point, and just follow the red arrows on your map. It'll take you on a circuitous route across the bridges over the daedric siege engine, but don't stop to sightsee. The local defenses will pitch fireballs at you when they notice you're outside.

When you find yourself in the tower called the World Breaker Guard, fight through to the top floor and throw the switch there to open the first gate. When you go back down, use the second-floor exit, a door will open ahead of you; this'll let you reach the second World Breaker Guard tower and hit the switch on its top floor.

Head back the way you came and use the newly-opened door on the bridge to open the World Breaker Citadel. This winds up being a lot like the other gates you've closed, but this time, you're on the clock. Don't fight; just run, kill the Sigil Keeper on the top floor, take his key, and use that to open up the sigil room. Finally, take the stone. You'll be transported back to outside Bruma, and will give Martin the Great Sigil Stone; at the same time, another Sigil Stone will fall out of the ruined siege engine.

When you're ready for a long trip, go back to Cloud Ruler Temple and talk to Martin. It's time to visit Paradise.

PARADISE

This is a nice place, honestly. You can harvest a lot of potion ingredients here, if you're of a mind to. The sad thing is that it's crawling with daedra.

Follow the path in a generally northeastern direction, and you'll confront Kathutet, a powerful dremora. He'll offer you a duel, or a chance to do him a service. If you choose the duel, you can take Bands of the Chosen off his corpse; these, as one of the local Ascended Immortals can tell you, are the key to escaping the Savage Garden.

Past Kathutet, you'll find a cavern that'll lead you to the Forbidden Grotto. You cannot enter without equipping the Bands of the Chosen, which cannot subsequently be removed. Dispatch the guardians around the caged prisoners (you can't rescue them, although throwing the lever's worth a laugh), then cross the bridge over the lava to meet Eldamil.

He's got you over a barrel, unfortunately. In the next room, he'll ask you to get into a cage; do so. Eldamil will look suspicious at first, but he'll get you across the lava. Explore the cavern until you find another door the Bands can open, and Eldamil will meet you on the other side. He'll remove the Bands.

Move the rest of the way through the Grotto until you reemerge in Paradise, with or without Eldamil. When you do, it's just a short walk to the temple where Mankar Camoran is waiting for you, along with his kids Raven and Ruma, regardless of whether you killed them earlier or not.

Thankfully, for all his posturing and obvious magical power, Mankar's not that bright. He'll sit there and give you his evil villain speech for a while, giving you plenty of time to cast buffs and drink potions. When the fight starts for real, ignore Raven and Ruma; go straight for Mankar. When he drops, so do they, and so does Paradise. Just make sure to take the Amulet of Kings off of Mankar's body before everything fades out.

LIGHT THE DRAGONFIRES

You're back in Cloud Ruler Temple. Give Martin the Amulet, then rest up and get your equipment repaired. Your next stop is the Imperial City Palace and a talk with Chancellor Ocato... which'll turn dangerous pretty quickly.

You've got plenty of backup and you don't have a long way to go; you just need to escort Martin over one screen, into the Temple District. However, you've also got a ton of daedra to deal with... and once you find the Temple of the One, there's Mehrunes Dagon himself, who's effectively invincible. Talk to Martin when Dagon shows up, then charge him and hit him with everything you've got. Spellcasters can throw debuffs combined with powerful electricity or cold spells, while melee types should run up and stab him in the ankles. You're not out to kill or even injure him; you just want him busy with you for a second so you can get Martin inside the temple.

Once you do that, it's all over but the shouting. You've done your job, and when the dust settles, you'll be appointed the Champion of Cyrodiil. Talk to Ocato, and he'll commission a set of shiny new Imperial Armor for you, which you can stop by and grab in two weeks' time.

That's it. You're a famous hero, but you're also still alive, and you've got plenty left to do. Go out and explore the world you just saved!
